Pacal-God

It is now convenient for us to fix our sight up to Palenque, some time ago I was exploring that marvelous tomb, and Palenque really offers magnificent surprises. Close to Palenque we found a funeral city still undiscovered, it is too bad all those temples and tombs are still there, completely covered by the jungle. All this amazed us, and we managed to find amazing stories from the people of Palenque.

It comes to my mind an incredible instance where some lady from the United States arrived to Palenque looking for a friend of ours who has lived there for many years, dedicated exclusively to the investigations of the Mayans. The lady asked for the services provided by our friend, an expert in such issues, and as is expected, he could not abstain from helping and serving her in all he could. She asked to be guided and he offered himself to serve as her guide.

What is amazing is that as he was ready to get into her vehicle, she told him: "You are the guide, but you will have to obey me, I will tell you where in the forest we will need to stop". Of course our friend was perplexed, "how could it be possible that she is asking me to be her guide and all of a sudden she wants to guide me?" Anyhow, who's guiding whom? They both got into the car and the lady, accompanied by her husband, arrived at certain place and asked him to stop stating: "here it is". Of course, our guide had no idea what was going on. She and her husband stepped out of the car and she asked our friend to do the same. She then said: "we will go straight this way, through this mountain, and we will get there".

A lady who had soon arrived from the United States and referring to him in such a way... It was all enough to have this man mortified, confused, and anyway he did not know what was going on. The lady opened herself way through the mountain and suddenly she stopped. "Here it is," she said. She lifted some stones and to the amazement of the guide, there was a tomb with human remains. "Let's go," she said, and both, her husband and the guide followed her. She went back to her car, they drove back to Palenque, paid their fees to the guide and left. Never again anyone knew anything about this lady.

Back in those woods, I also got to that place, obviously it was the guide who took me there and told me:

"Here is a magnetic force, could you tell me Master, where in this place is located the center of this magnetic force?" Telepathically I felt the center of that magnetic field was located right where the tomb was located, hidden among stones. "Could it be somewhere else?" the guide said, "well let's go around," I stated, and so we did. We walked around and then I said: "here is the other pole of that magnetic field". "You are right Master, here it is!" the guide exclaimed. We moved once again to the center of the field, he lifted the stones and there were the remains. It was then when the guide told me about the strange story that I've just told you.

There are many interesting stories in Palenque. That guide is in contact with the Mayans and it results interesting that Mayans are still alive. We once asked to a Mayan elder: "When do you think the great catastrophe that menaces the Earth will arrive?"

To which he replied “during the Katun 13”.

“Will your son see it?”

“No, my son will not see it

“Will your grandson see it?”

“Yes, my grandson will see it.”

“When will the Katun 13 arrive?”

“In the year 2043.”

A great catastrophe awaits and the Mayans are well informed. Some person, whose name I will not mention, a high authority in mundane anthropology once affirmed: “the Mayans have no astronomical knowingness, they are ignorant”. But the truth is that they do know about astronomy, in detail and in depth.

Even these days they spend much time performing complex mathematical calculations. The Mayans taught my friend – the guide – a system based on grains of corn and coffee with which they perform their arithmetic calculations in fractions of a second.

Once our friend told a great mathematician: “You could use very well your computers and could be a professor in mathematics, but I challenge you to complete a mathematical operation... you with your computers and myself with my grains of corn and coffee.”

The man replied:

“Perhaps you know a lot, but you are being disrespectful.”

“No sir, I do not wish to be disrespectful,” our friend said. “I only want to demonstrate that the Mayan people are experts in mathematics, and that while you handle your computers to perform your calculations, here we do the same calculations faster than any computer. If you’d like, let’s make the experiment.”

That professor, filled with pride, preferred to remain quiet and left overseeing his wristwatch. “It is getting late”, he said, and left.

See for yourself that the Mayan people are not ignorant, as some people believe. The Mayans really spend time performing astronomical calculations, and they know that a cosmic world approaches Earth, a world the men of science have already baptized with the name of ‘Barnard I’. That world belongs to another solar system; it has its own enormous orbit and approaches our world Earth at a dangerous pace.

When ‘Barnard I’ becomes visible at plain sight, extraordinary and catastrophic events will take place. This is not ignored by the Mayans. As it is written in the Katun 13, that gigantic world, because of its magnetic field will pull towards the surface of the Earth it’s liquid fire, volcanoes will appear here and there; there will be terrible earthquakes and cataclysms.

This will be according to the Mayans, during the Katun 13, the year 2043. They prepare themselves for this event and they say: “My son will not see it, my grandson will”.

They are wise in great ways. Based on their doctrine, during “the maximum closeness” of ‘Barnard I’, the poles of the Earth will rotate, the seas will change their beds and will devour the earth. This will cause a radical change in the geology of our world. What is most amazing is that the Mayans, from long ago, judged our actual humanity, stating that as the Katun 13 approached, we would be able to see “day and night” men who will be the shame of our race.

Studying in depth these ‘day and night’ men, they referred to the homosexuals; homosexuals and lesbians, something that is currently happening, would pervert the whole world. The great Universal Fire forecasted by Nostradamus is already written in the Mayan’s Katun 13. They have stated, “The fire, like blood, will burn all around, and will burn all that is alive”. The Mayans do not ignore any of this, and it is all to come.

Well, I was in the tomb of Pacal-God. The tomb has a huge chiseled stone cover. Don Pedro Ferriz, a distinguished gentleman dedicated to serious studies and investigations on flying saucers, suggested this chiseled stone cover demonstrated the Pacal-God of the Mayans was an astronaut, a space traveler.

Though I admire Pedro Ferriz, I disagree, because I cautiously examined that great stone cover and validated that Pacal-God was not a visitor from another planet as Don Pedro suggested. Over the stone cover that covers the tomb, a stone that weights various tons, there is a cross-made with corn stalls. That cross invites us to reflect in the Mayans, the Nahuas, the Zapotecas, Toltecs, etc.

Corn is sacred, and symbolizes the root of the human race. In China, India, Japan, etc., the root of the human race is symbolized by rice and in the Christian cities in Europe and the Middle East; the human root is symbolized by the wheat.

This cross, made out of corn stalls, obviously results significant since we know that the cross is also an instrument of liberation. In reality, the insertion of the vertical Phallus into the formal Ectais, build a cross, and if such a cross is made out of corn stalls, it shows something extraordinary. It is obvious that the Ens Seminis, inside which the ENS Virtutis of the fire is contained, exist extraordinary powers. The Ens Seminis, or Sacred Sperm of the human being, contains mystical, transcendental powers the Mayans examined closely, not only in Palenque, but also in Can-cun, in Chichén Itzá, etc.

If people knew the power contained in the Ens Seminis, they would never waste that energy in such foolish ways to please the brutal animal passions. Before they allowed that to happen, they would learn how to perform the transmutation. The Mayans knew such science, and they knew, for example, that “if they did not spill the Cup of Hermes – or ejaculate the Ens Seminis – they could transmute it into energy that creates”.

The result of such transmutation is the rise of a third force, a deeply divine force. I refer to the sacred fire, when it rises inside the dorsal spine of men it transforms us radically and converts us into real super-men, like the Pacal-God.

We walked down the stairs that lead to the tomb; a triangular stone sealed the entrance, currently that stone is located to the side. The fact that it is a triangular stone leads us to think about the many triangular stones at gothic cathedrals in Europe.

The triangular stone represents the Christian world; the Father, the son and the Holy Spirit; the three forces of nature; the Holy Affirmation, the Holy Negation and the Holy Conciliation, that joins together the other two sides.

These three forces together lead to a new creation and bring to the world a new Son, a new root. The Mayans understood this, and the fact that the stone that sealed the tomb of Pacal-God is triangular in shape results interesting

There is a well-made chest shield protecting the chest of Pacal-God with nine necklaces (9). Those nine necklaces represent the ninth Dantesque Circle, "the well of the Universe inside the human organism".

His reproductive organs show that Pacal-God was a man who transformed the sacred sperm in creative energy, a pure man, in the highest sense of the word, a man who never adulterated, who never fornicated.

In his neck appear three (3) additional necklaces representing the three primal forces of nature and the cosmos, showing Pacal-God was able to crystallize in his own nature the forces of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit – the Holy Affirmation, the Holy Negation and the Holy Conciliation. He managed to shape these forces within his own self.

Pacal-God also had 10 rings, one in each finger. This tells us about the 10 Sephirot of the Hebrew Kabbalah, a man who filled himself with extraordinary virtues, a real Avatar or Messenger for the humanity of that epoch; a man who gave the Mayans great knowledge.

In one of his hands there is a cube, a cubical stone, and in the other, a sphere. The cubical stone shows this man was sapient, that he owned the philosophical stone, the stone of the truth, a man who had found the truth. Regarding the sphere, it shows it was a perfect man, a man who had awakened his consciousness, and a man who enjoyed infinite knowingness.

However, there is one thing that terrifies, that amazes, that scares. He was buried with 6 beheaded men. It is symbolic, but the six beheaded men are a fact. Pacal-God was buried with beheaded men to drive a message through posterity; and we recognize the way to promote this message was brutal. The Mayans wanted to convey this man had eliminated his psychological defects. When we consult the Hebrew Kabbalah, we find the Star of Solomon with its six rays. Six rays are masculine and six rays are feminine. Those 12 rays account for the 12 zodiacal constellations; and the number six also reminds us of love, passion, and the lover (the 6th arcane). This man was able to eliminate all his passion defects, all those psychic aggregates that condemned him; he reached the maximum perfection and the testimonial for eternity were the six beheaded. If we did not know about the Hebrew Kabbalah, it would be impossible to understand the significance of these six beheaded men.

The tomb of Pacal-God is fantastic. It carries a Mask of Jade that has been reconstructed by the Anthropology Museum. That Mask of Jade shows us his face was so perfect that it had to be protected from the profane ones, the face of a man-god.

A monument was constructed to bury this Avatar or Messenger for the Mayans, the man called Pacal.

Pacal was a man who worked with corn, with the root. In the cover of his tomb he appears as descending from the cross. That is why Don Pedro Ferriz thought this man was handling a vehicle capable of traveling through space.

There is also a symbol of Mars, to show us that Pacal-God was related in some way to the Planet Mars, but that does not mean that he was an inhabitant from Mars or an extraterrestrial from Mars, but a man influenced by Martian radiation, a man of energetic character, a strong man who knew how to teach the Mayans his doctrine.

Investigating all these Mayan things, all these anthropological aspects, we should deeply reflect on their significance. We are in a time where a huge catastrophe approaches our world according to the Mayans, and before the catastrophe reaches our world, there will be war all around the Earth – something that has also been prophesized by other wise men.

We see war all around, the Middle East, for example, is currently in a new war. There are calamities everywhere, before the Katun 13. Let's realize the bottom of the seas has cracked. Cracks are deep enough, as in the Pacific Ocean, that have led water in contact with the liquid fire from the interior of the world. As a consequence, vapor and pressure are building up inside the Earth. These vapors originate earthquakes; such pressures generate tidal waves here and there. Obviously, Earth is in agony. Scientists know this. Fish all around the world are reduced in quantity due to contamination. Human beings are ill because of contamination. The air is polluted and many humans are ill because of this pollution. Some men of science once said that if we were not able to control the smog, before 40 years half of our humanity would perish.

The land is sterile. At this moment the land is not capable of producing what humanity needs. We have to know that over the face of the Earth exist 4,500 million people, and that fertile lands are in agony. The fruits of our Earth have been altered by our "wise men" and these, with their "knowledge" have caused great damage by mating plants with other plants, creating fruit that will please the eye, but without the same vital force of the real fruit. It is absurd to try to correct Nature. It is absurd to correct, "That who knows what she is doing".

Beloved, after traveling through the lands of the Mayans, and having learned what will come to the Earth, the Katun 13, I wanted to talk to you tonight to tell you that the Mayan people are not ignorant and that all those people from Mexico have been gifted with divine knowingness
